A letter from our EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Dear Friends,

Whew! 2020 has come to an end. 2020 was most definitely a year full of adventure! The pandemic created new challenges and forced us to adapt to new and different routines and wow, did we have to be flexible!

We have all known many who have stated they would like to just erase 2020. This is likely how most child victims feel about the trauma they experienced. Isn't it better though, to take the lead of these children? They are the epitome of resilience. Their willingness to address challenges head on and begin the new adventure of healing is something we can all admire and strive for.

CAP is proud to have continued to provide uninterrupted services throughout the pandemic, serving 314 children who ventured through our doors as they began to travel down their road of healing.

We all hope 2021 comes with many new and great adventures in a MUCH better form than 2020! We look forward to continuing our mission in 2021 as we continue serve our community's children. Thank you for supporting the Children's Advocacy Project! Your support is invaluable!

Stacy M. Nelson, Executive Director

CHILD ABUSE and COVID-19

In 2020, home became the intended safe space to shelter from coronavirus, but the sad fact for many children is that the majority of child abuse happens at home and happens within the family. With schools closed, teachers and other school staff who make up the largest portion of child abuse reports were no longer regularly seeing children to be able to spot the signs of abuse.

Added stress on families, financial stress, disrupted routines, and lack of access to community support due to COVID-19 are all contributors to an uptick in child maltreatment. This period of isolation, while necessary to keep children and families safe from the pandemic, is a perfect storm for child abuse to rise and for cases to go unreported.

Everyone can play a role in maintaining the health and well-being of families, and communities:

- Stay connected to family and friends, and checking in on neighbors and other community members (while taking the proper safety measures).
- Share positive news and acts of kindness with your community.
- Connect families with virtual programming for children—many public institutions and community centers are providing free virtual experiences, including educational resources, games and activities, tours of popular museums and attractions, and physical activities.
- Continue to help support programs and services that strengthen families in our community.
- Learn to recognize the warning signs and symptoms of abuse and neglect.

YEAR IN review

February

Natrona County man, Talon Johnson, 21, was arrested after his infant son was found dead on the couch after being left on his stomach. A physical examination also revealed bruises on his brain, a Vitamin D deficiency, and signs that he had been left in a dirty diaper for an extended period of time. The house reeked of animal urine and feces and a highchair that was plastered in rotten baby food. Johnson is charged with manslaughter, two counts of child endangerment with meth present and two more counts of child endangerment.

March

Mills man, Tyrell Wimer entered a plea to a single count of aggravated child abuse, which alleges he injured a 6-month-old boy who he is not related to. The child was diagnosed with six broken bones – including a skull fracture and a traumatic brain injury. In an interview with a police detective, Wimer said that he did not abuse the child, but the documents state he said he could have accidentally stepped on the boy while moving boxes. The child abuse pediatrician who treated the baby told the detective that the skull fracture could only be the result of intentional abuse, according to the documents.

May

Two-month-old infant was “in a state of starvation” while under the care of Natrona County woman, Dominique Clark. Clark was charged with two counts of child abuse and a single count of child endangerment. The child was not Clark’s but her boyfriend’s. Clark was responsible for the child’s care while he was at work. The investigation began when the child was taken to her two-month checkup. The baby should have weighed 9.81 pounds but instead weighed 6.57, less than she did when she was born roughly two months earlier. The baby also had bruises on her face and neck including her left eye, ear, temple and cheek, as well as a significant rash on her torso. The baby had a large bald spot on the back of her head, consistent with being forced to lay down for long periods of time. Child abuse is a felony punishable by up to 10 years behind bars while child endangerment is a misdemeanor punishable by a year in jail.

June

Rowdy Irish Patterson of Casper faces felony child endangerment and abuse charges after allegedly feeding methamphetamine to a 5-year-old. The mother returned from work to find the child victim “acting strangely” with dilated pupils and “didn’t seem to have control.” This prompted the mother to take the child to Wyoming Medical Center. The child made references to eating something that looked like “snow” on his dinosaur-shaped chicken nugget.

June

Wyoming Highway Patrol troopers were notified of a possible victim of human trafficking. The initial clues were observed by a Colorado Port of Entry officer while inspecting a commercial vehicle. The officer had recently completed in-depth training provided by Truckers Against Trafficking. The driver of the truck had an outstanding warrant from Oklahoma for child sexual abuse and was arrested without incident.

August

Former Casper middle school teacher, Jason Waugaman, pleads guilty to sexual abuse of a 14-year-old student whose seventh grade class he taught for about a month. Waugaman worked for Natrona County School District for more than a decade, is now charged with three felony counts of sexual abuse: two in the second-degree and another in the third.

August

Lisa Canady of Mills who admitted to duct taping her children and giving them marijuana was sentenced to probation of three years. If she breaks the conditions of the plea agreement, she could serve a sentence of 8-15 years in prison. The juvenile victim told school officials that they had been duct taped, leading to Canady's arrest. The child also told police that they and their siblings were given marijuana to "take a nap" and were duct taped because they "would not take a nap."

August

Judge sentences Joshua Hicks to 55 years in prison and supervision for 85 years for the abduction and molestation of a 4-year-old girl. Hicks had taken the child from where she played outside of a Casper home, sparking a law enforcement man hunt that lasted 18 hours. Police caught up with him when his truck rolled through a stop sign. He admitted to kidnapping the girl and exposing himself to her. Hicks has abused children before and had previously been suspected of a sexual crime.

October

Steven Lockard, 25, of Natrona County was sentenced to three to five years in prison after pleading guilty to taking indecent liberties with a child. The 14-year-old victim was found by police lying naked in bed with Lockard hiding beneath the sheets. The victim defended Lockard, but a girl of her age is legally unable to provide consent to a man of Lockard's age.

November

Mills couple Ryan and Sarah Hilyard are being charged after causing injuries to a 12-year-old that left the child needing to be intubated and required him to have part of his skull removed. Sarah brought the boy – her stepson – into the hospital after calling staff and reporting that he was unresponsive. The child was suffering from respiratory failure, retinal hemorrhage, and severe traumatic brain injury. Sarah told investigators that the child fell down the stairs a day or two before the hospital visit. One of the siblings in the case told police Ryan was making the 12-year-old run up and down the stairs, punching him, dragging the victim up and down the stairs, and eventually pushed the victim down the stairs. The victim was knocked out and the couple reportedly yelled, punched and kicked him while on the ground.

You're off to great places,
Today is your day!
Your mountain is waiting,
So . . . get on your way!

Thank You!

The Children's Advocacy Project would like to extend our deepest appreciation for the individuals, businesses, and partners who continue to support the work we do year after year. In a year filled with hardship for many and with COVID restrictions, no fundraisers were held in 2020. However, we would like to thank all of those who have donated in past years and who continue to invest in the belief that no child should be without services needed to heal from abuse. With your support we will continue to work together to create a world that better responds to and prevents child abuse.
